

Photo by: Kristy Benjamin

"They've grown up amid the chaos and confusion of the internet age, fed constant information at a terrifying rate. Their frenzied, abrasive, kitchen-sink approach to rock'n'roll encapsulates that perfectly."- NME

"An irresistible reintroduction and statement of purpose for the band, and a frenzied addition to their growing canon of killer tracks."- Under The Radar

"Uncompromisingly heavy yet also an impossibly melodic bop, 'Early Bopper' is the latest triumph from an act that seem to set a new bar with each release."- CLOUT

BIO:

Liily are four Los Angeles musicians- Dylan Nash, Sam De La Torre, Charlie Anastasis & Maxx Morando - who, up until now, were mostly known for their manic and cacophonous live shows. Those performances, alongside a couple of early singles packaged together into an EP entitled I Can Fool Anybody In This Town, drove the band to some surprising early successes: performing at Lollapalooza and Bonnaroo, touring across Europe and the United States, then finding themselves on the cover of Spotify and Apple Music's major rock playlists. But then, as quickly as they appeared, they seemed to vanish. Almost two years later, and now all of 22 years old, the band return with their debut album TV or Not TV in October. It is a highly aggressive record, even more so than their early work. But here they jump from moment to moment and genre to genre, creating an experimental and original set of songs, all more strange and abrasive but also far more three dimensional than anything the band has done before. It still contains the unbridled energy of those early shows and singles but feels stripped of anything passive or unintentional. "I think thematically it's very different," says singer Dylan Nash. "I think the intensity of it is very different. I think we had the same intention though which is to completely obliterate people's ear drums - that's what it still has in common."

HIGHLIGHTS:

- Featured on Spotify's Rock This, New Noise, Pulp, Noisy, All New Rock, Today We Rock + more
- Featured on Apple Music's New Music Daily, New in Rock, Sinister Sounds, New in Indie, The New Rock, Fresh Blood, Rock Replay, The Riff, Fresh Blood Up Next playlists + more
- Chosen as VEVO DSCVR artist (2020)
- TV or Not TV (2021 LP) announce premiered in NME
- Multiple US tours and festival placements including Bonnaroo, Lollapalooza, Shaky Knees, Voodoo Music + Arts, Download Festival (Spain), and The Great Escape Festival (UK)

WATCH:

"Sold" Live - VEVO DSCVR

"I Am Who You Think I Think I Am"

"Early Bopper"

LISTEN:

Upcoming:

TV or Not TV LP
(Fall 2021)

Listen

Past:

I Can Fool
Anybody In
This Town (EP)
Listen

liilytheband.com

@liilytheband

